In order to get somewhere in life, you have to know where you are going! After reviewing your GPA and rank, work with your mentor to identify your personal and academic strengths and then create goals for the future based on your present strengths, GPA, and what you want to be when you grow up. Once you have set goals, begin to work with your mentor on the steps you can take to achieve them.

Remember: Your goals should be realistic but ambitious.

My Best Work

Please describe three of your best pieces of work or class activities or projects that demonstrate what you have learned in this Core Pathways class:

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

Please include these 3 pieces in your portfolios folder. If your example of mastery is demonstrated by an experience (a trip, a role play, a hands-on project or class activity), please write a paragraph describing this experience and what you learned.

What I Have Learned:

Please list a few of the core learnings from this Core Pathways class you wish to remember that will help you succeed in high school and college (your class can brainstorm together):

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

4. _____

5. _____

Good Habits I Am Developing:

Please think about habits that make a good student and list one habit you think you have mastered this marking period (these can be things like using a student planner, coming to school on time, doing your homework, taking notes, having a study buddy, listening actively and participating in class, defusing conflicts, managing anger, etc.):

Moving to College: How Can You Help?

The transition to college life can be difficult for students. They may be living on their own, and academics may be harder than in high school. Your role as a parent/guardian is also changing, as you take on a supporting role, rather than being involved in day-to-day decisions. We encourage parents/guardians to be supportive of students in the transition to college without being overly involved. Here are some tips that might help.

- Encourage your student to call home as often as needed. You may want to set up a regular time to call or email, but try to remember that college students' schedules are often irregular.
- Allow students to make their own decisions. Be supportive even if you don't agree. Offer your advice and encourage them to gather as much information as possible to make an appropriate decision.
- Don't worry if what you hear from your student is different than what other parents/guardians hear. Some students talk more about the struggles while others may focus on positive experiences, but each student goes through highs and lows.
- Don't worry if they're having second thoughts about their college choice. The transition is difficult for most students. Listen.
- Let your child vent about their frustrations. If you feel like they need to complain, let them complain. If you think they need to cry, let them cry. Then, assess the situation and see if there are some suggestions you can offer.
- Make an agreement with your student about their academic effort. Ask students about their grades.
- Let your student decide the frequency of visits home. Make sure they don't feel guilty about not going home enough, or about wanting to stay on campus to study and be with friends.
- When students come home for break, they'll be tired. Let them sleep. Expect that they will want to spend time with friends from home.
- When your child comes home, they will need to transition back to life with your rules and expectations. Remember that they have been living on their 'own.' Having a conversation before they arrive home about your expectations can be helpful.
- All students love to get mail in their campus mailbox! Ask your child if they would like a subscription to your local newspaper or copies of the church bulletin.
- Send your child care packages throughout the year with necessities as well as fun things.
- If your child's birthday occurs while they are at college, think about sending them a cake to share with their friends.
- Encourage healthy eating habits and getting plenty of rest. Don't forget breakfast!

Supporting Your College-Student Child

You matter in your child’s transition to college. They need you for support and guidance. Here are some insights into what your child’s life might be like at college, which might help you provide the support they need.

Your child’s life as a college student:

For every hour of class, it is estimated that students need three hours of prep time (to do readings, finish assignments, or study for quizzes and tests). It may seem that your child has lots of free time since they only have one or two classes a day but that is not the case. The chart below that shows how much time your child may need to prepare for classes, each week.

Credits	In-Class Instruction Time	Expected Prep Time
3-credit course	3 hours per week	9 hours per week
4-credit course	4 hours per week	12 hours per week
Part-time student (9-12 credits)	9-12 hours per week	27-36 hours per week
Full-time student (15-18 credits)	15-18 hours per week	45-54 hours per week
Total in-class instruction and expected prep time for full-time students		48-72 hours per week

Remember that the table above is an estimate of average study time. During some intense weeks, such as midterms and finals, your child will live and breathe with their books!

Finally, remember that in addition to class and prep time, your child will probably dedicate additional time to student organizations and social activities.

Your role as a parent/guardian:

- Your child will complain, cry, and be miserable at times and that is NORMAL. You can help by listening, encouraging, and loving them through this process.
- Don’t try to solve their problems. It is important that your child take responsibility for their actions and the consequences of them.
- Ask about their courses and how they are doing. If they’re struggling, suggest that they meet with a professor or teaching assistant or visit their school’s math or writing center.
